Boat Mill situated in Sibiu Museum in Romania.

Napoleonic field Mill

FelinFach Blaenpennal: A two-storey rubble-built water powered corn mill under a slate roof, set into the east bank of the Afon Aeron, and probably dating from the early nineteenth century.

Wymondham Mill: Located in Leicestershire. Built from local ironstone and topped with brick, the Windmill is a five-story tower mill circa 1814. It has an ogee cap and fantail.

Moulen d'Ande: The mill is located 25km from Rouen on the river Seine. It was believed the walls of mill were originally constructed in the 15th century.

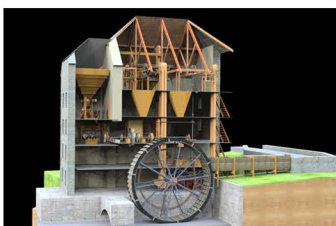

Woad Parsons Grove: The last portable woad mill to stay in production in England and Europe was at Parson Drove, Cambridgeshire. It was erected in many places, until it finally came to rest at Parson Drove and was pulled down in 1914.

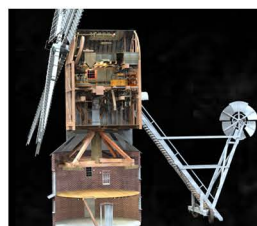

Takola Windmill: Ta Kola Windmill(known in Maltese as Mithhna ta' Kola) is located in the village of Xagra on the island of Gozo which forms part of the Maltese archipelago. It was built in 1787.

Carew Tidal Mill: Carew Tidal Mill (Melin Caeriw in Welsh) is a corn mill in Pembrokeshire, Wales, powered by tidal water. It was built around 1801 just west of Carew Castle, and replaced a much older mill in Clashganna Mill: Located in Clashganny, Borris. Detached two-storey former corn mill, c. 1850, with half-hipped roof. Remains of waterwheel to site. Now disused.

Friston Mill: A post mill, built 1812 in Friston, Suffolk, England, raised by the addition of a brick roundhouse and altered in approximately 1872, with maintenance and structural work undertaken in the late C20 and early C21.

Cliefion Mill: This is another Lost mill. It was dismantled in 1986. Had it not been for David H Jones of the Mills Research Group carrying out a survey in 1983 there would be no record of the interior or its workings.

Glencairn: Glencairn is a derelict South African watermill located near Simons town on their west coast near to Cape town. It was probably built in 1820.
